THE ARTICLE

Maradona breaks airport door in anger

The former Argentinian football star Diego Maradona has flown home to Buenos Aires following his arrest at Rio de Janeiro's international airport. Police detained the legendary soccer wizard after he broke down an airport door in the VIP lounge. He had been late for check-in. When ground staff told him he could not board the flight because it was ready for take-off, he became irate, flew into a rage and started to "destroy" whatever was in his vicinity. Police interrogated him for several hours and he was released after Argentine president Nestor Kirchner ordered diplomats in Brazil to intervene on his behalf. Former Argentine player and travel companion Alejandro Mancuso said Maradona's rage was "logical and spontaneous" because staff "shut the door in our faces".

Maradona has overcome cocaine and alcohol addiction since retiring from professional football in 1997, and has also had repeated gun related run-ins with the police. Mr. Mancuso denied suggestions appearing in the Brazilian press that Maradona's tantrum had been fueled by alcohol. He is widely acknowledged as being one of the best, if not the best, players of all time, helping his country capture the 1986 World Cup in Italy. He is revered and enjoys cult status in much of Latin America, where he counts presidents Castro of Cuba and Chavez of Venezuela as his close friends. He led protests against U.S. President George W. Bush at a regional summit in Argentina in November. Maradona has since resolved the fracas at the airport by offering to pay for the damage to the departure lounge door.
