THE ARTICLE

From <http://www.BreakingNewsEnglish.com/1709/170913-handwriting.html>

The world-renowned Cambridge University is considering abolishing handwritten exams after 800 years. University officials may ask students to type their exam answers on a computer rather than use a pen. The move follows complaints from examination markers who say they are finding test papers increasingly illegible due to poor handwriting. Academics say today's students primarily use laptops in lectures and tutorials instead of pens. Students are losing the ability to write by hand. One academic said asking students to hand-write exams actually causes them physical difficulties. The muscles in their hand are not used to writing extensively for prolonged periods of two to three hours.

A Cambridge University lecturer, Dr Sarah Pearsall, told Britain's 'Daily Telegraph' newspaper that handwriting was becoming a "lost art". She said: "Twenty years ago, students routinely [wrote] by hand several hours a day, but now they write virtually nothing by hand, except exams." She added: "We have been concerned for years about the declining handwriting problem. There has definitely been a downward trend. It is difficult for both the students and the examiners as it is harder and harder to read these [exam] scripts." Dr Pearsall says some students' handwriting is so illegible that they had to return to the university over the summer to read their answers out loud to examiners who could not read their writing.

WARM-UPS

1. HANDWRITING: Students walk around the class and talk to other students about handwriting. Change partners often and share your findings.

2. CHAT: In pairs / groups, talk about these topics or words from the article. What will the article say about them? What can you say about these words and your life?

world-renowned / handwriting / exams / answers / illegible / lectures / muscles / a lost art / twenty years ago / problem / trend / examiners / harder / university

Have a chat about the topics you liked. Change topics and partners frequently.

3. WRITE BY HAND: Students A strongly believe it is no longer necessary to write by hand in today's digital world; Students B strongly believe writing by hand is essential. Change partners again and talk about your conversations.

4. WRITING: Is it better to write these things by hand or type them on a keyboard? Complete this table with your partner(s). Change partners often and share what you wrote.

	By Hand (Using a Pen)	On a Smartphone / Computer Keyboard
Essays
Shopping list
Birthday cards
Exams
Poems
Diary / Journal

5. EXAMS: Spend one minute writing down all of the different words you associate with the word "exams". Share your words with your partner(s) and talk about them. Together, put the words into different categories.

6. LEGIBLE: Rank these with your partner. Put the most important things to be legible at the top. Change partners often and share your rankings.

- exam
- signature
- doctor's prescription
- shopping list
- love letter

The world-renowned Cambridge University is considering abolishing handwritten exams after 800 years. University officials may ask students to type their exam answers on a computer rather than use a pen. The move follows complaints from examination markers who say they are finding test papers increasingly illegible due to poor handwriting. Academics say today's students primarily use laptops in lectures and tutorials instead of pens. Students are losing the ability to write by hand. One academic is asking students to hand-write exams, actually causing them physical difficulties. The muscles in their hands are not used to writing extensively for prolonged periods of two to three hours. A Cambridge University lecturer, Dr Sarah Pearsall, told Britain's 'Daily Telegraph' newspaper that handwriting was becoming a "lost art". She said: "Twenty years ago, students routinely [wrote] by hand several hours a day, but now they write virtually nothing by hand, except exams." She added: "We have been concerned for years about the declining handwriting problem. There has definitely been a downward trend. It is difficult for both the students and the examiners as it is harder and harder to read these [exam] scripts." Dr Pearsall says some students' handwriting is so illegible that they had to return to the university over the summer to read their answers out loud to examiners who could not read their writing.

Handwriting is an important art we all need to learn and be good at. Discuss.

HOMework

1. VOCABULARY EXTENSION: Choose several of the words from the text. Use a dictionary or Google's search field (or another search engine) to build up more associations / collocations of each word.

2. INTERNET: Search the Internet and find out more about handwriting. Share what you discover with your partner(s) in the next lesson.

3. HANDWRITING: Make a poster about handwriting. Show your work to your classmates in the next lesson. Did you all have similar things?

4. A LOST ART: Write a magazine article about handwriting becoming a lost art. Include imaginary interviews with people who think young people should learn to write and with people who think handwriting skills are not so important.

Read what you wrote to your classmates in the next lesson. Write down any new words and expressions you hear from your partner(s).

5. WHAT HAPPENED NEXT? Write a newspaper article about the next stage in this news story. Read what you wrote to your classmates in the next lesson. Give each other feedback on your articles.

6. LETTER: Write a letter to an expert on handwriting. Ask him/her three questions about it. Give him/her three of your opinions on the importance of handwriting. Read your letter to your partner(s) in your next lesson. Your partner(s) will answer your questions.
