Beijing citizens learn Olympics manners

The Chinese government has already started to clean up its capital city, ahead of the 2008 Olympic Games. Beijing officials started a new campaign recently to make citizens behave better. Over fifty people have been fined in the past week for spitting in the streets. China’s state media reported on Monday that this is part of Beijing’s attempts to step up its efforts to "civilize" its citizens before the Olympics start. Government workers also handed out more than 10,000 bags to tourists to encourage them to keep the city tidy and free from litter. Special teams patrolled the city's tourist sites during China’s week-long Labour Day holiday. This is a time when hundreds of millions of Chinese are on the streets, and spitting and littering are at their height.

For a long time now, China has been worried about its image as the world spotlight will be on Beijing. A Chinese news agency Xinhua quoted a travel guide as saying: "The Olympics are coming, and we don't want to get disgraced." The China National Tourism Administration has printed thousands of leaflets educating citizens and tourists on correct “street etiquette”. Also on the list of do's and don'ts is jumping queues; people are reminded they have to stand in line and wait patiently. The eleventh day of every month is now "voluntarily wait in line" day in Beijing. Authorities hope this will stamp out pushing and shoving. Clearing one’s throat loudly is another no-no. The city hopes its citizens will win the gold medal for perfect manners.

WARM-UPS

1. OLYMPICS: Walk around the class and talk to other students about the Olympics. Change partners often. After you finish, sit with your original partner(s) and share what you found out.

2. CHAT: In pairs / groups, decide which of these topics or words from the article are most interesting and which are most boring.

   China / capital cities / campaigns / spitting / litter / being tidy / streets / height / spotlights / Beijing / leaflets / etiquette / do’s and don’ts / gold medals

   Have a chat about the topics you liked. For more conversation, change topics and partners frequently.

3. MY MANNERS: Write down a list of the points in which you are very well behaved. Make another list of areas where your manners need improving. Share these with your partner(s).

4. RUDE PEOPLE: Brainstorm a list of nationalities. With your partner(s), decide how well-behaved these people are. Change partners and share your ideas.

5. TOURISTS: With your partner(s), make a list of the things tourists do in your country which you think are bad mannered. Change partners and share your ideas.

6. MANNERS: Spend one minute writing down all of the different words you associate with manners. Share your words with your partner(s) and talk about them. Together, put the words into different categories.

7. BAD BEHAVIOUR: In pairs / groups, rank which of these actions are the worst manners in the street - worst at the top.

   - spitting
   - eating as you walk
   - dropping litter
   - walking slowly
   - queue jumping
   - listening to a loud Walkman
   - staring at people
   - drinking alcohol

8. QUICK DEBATE: Have this quick debate with your partner(s). Students A think good street manners are important; students B think good street manners are not important. Change partners and topics every two minutes.

HOMEWORK

1. VOCABULARY EXTENSION: Choose several of the words from the text. Use a dictionary or Google’s search field (or another search engine) to build up more associations / collocations of each word.

2. INTERNET: Search the Internet and find more information about the “street etiquette” campaign in Beijing. Talk about what you discover with your partner(s) in the next lesson.

3. MANNERS POSTER: Make a poster about the manners a perfect English student should have in class. Show your poster to your class in the next lesson. Vote on the best one(s).

4. MAGAZINE ARTICLE: Write a magazine article about street manners. In particular, write about your town. Read what you wrote to your classmates in the next lesson. Which article was best and why?

5. LETTER: Write a letter to the mayor of Beijing. Ask him/her three questions about the “street etiquette” campaign. Give him/her three pieces of advice about what they should do next to clean up Beijing and people’s manners. Read your letter to your partner(s) in your next lesson. Your partner(s) will answer your questions.
