THE ARTICLE

From <https://breakingnewsenglish.com//2302/230220-post-office-letter.html>

Many moons ago, it took an age to send someone a message. Today, we have the Internet. We can instantly send someone on the other side of the world a message using email. One message that arrived earlier this week was not so instant. A letter was mailed from the English city of Bath in 1916. It then got lost in the post. It was finally delivered 107 years later to an address in London. The Royal Mail postal service in the UK said it was "uncertain what happened". A spokesperson said she was delighted the letter finally arrived, but had no idea why it was more than a century late. She said it may have fallen behind a piece of furniture.

Before the Internet, people wrote letters on paper. They then put these letters in an envelope. The sender then bought a stamp from a post office and stuck it on the envelope. They then put it in a mail box in the street. A postal worker would collect the envelope and the letter would begin its journey. It usually took a few days to reach its destination, if the address was in the same country. It could take weeks if the address was overseas. It sailed on a ship and was called "sea mail". Later, airplanes transported mail and we used "air mail". However, there was a slight problem with the letter that arrived 107 years late. The person to whom it was addressed was no longer living. He passed away in 1951.

WARM-UPS

1. WRITING LETTERS: Students walk around the class and talk to other students about writing letters. Change partners often and share your findings.

2. CHAT: In pairs / groups, talk about these topics or words from the article. What will the article say about them? What can you say about these words and your life?

moons / an age / message / the world / email / this week / address / delighted / idea
Internet / paper / stamp / postal worker / journey / overseas / air mail / airplanes

Have a chat about the topics you liked. Change topics and partners frequently.

3. POST OFFICE: Students A strongly believe post offices are essential; Students B strongly believe they aren't. Change partners again and talk about your conversations.

4. DELIVERY: How often are these things delivered to you? How do you feel when you get them? How do you feel if they are late? Complete this table with your partner(s). Change partners often and share what you wrote.

	How Often	Delivery	Lateness
Letters
Pizza
Amazon parcels Energy bills
Flowers
Games

5. MOON: Spend one minute writing down all of the different words you associate with the word "moon". Share your words with your partner(s) and talk about them. Together, put the words into different categories.

6. BEING LATE: Rank these with your partner. Put the worst things to be late at the top. Change partners often and share your rankings.

- A pizza delivery
- A friend
- A train or bus
- An Amazon parcel
- A birthday card
- Teachers
- The start of a movie
- Spring

many moons ago it took an age to send someone a message today we have the internet we can instantly send someone on the other side of the world a message using email one message that arrived earlier this week was not so instant a letter was mailed from the english city of bath in 1916 it then got lost in the post it was finally delivered 107 years later to an address in london the royal mail postal service in the uk said it was uncertain what happened a spokesperson said she was delighted the letter finally arrived but had no idea why it was more than a century late she said it may have fallen behind a piece of furniture

before the internet people wrote letters on paper they then put these letters in an envelope the sender then bought a stamp from a post office and stuck it on the envelope they then put it in a mail box in the street a postal worker would collect the envelope and the letter would begin its journey it usually took a few days to reach its destination if the address was in the same country it could take weeks if the address was overseas it sailed on a ship and was called sea mail later airplanes transported mail and we used air mail however there was a slight problem with the letter that arrived 107 years late the person to whom it was addressed was no longer living he passed away in 1951

Many moons ago, it took a long time to send someone a message. Today, we have the Internet. We can instantly send someone on the other side of the world a message using email. One message that arrived earlier this week was not so instant. A letter was mailed from the English city of Bath in 1916. It then got lost in the post. It was finally delivered 107 years later to an address in London. The Royal Mail postal service in the UK said it was "uncertain what happened". A spokesperson said she was delighted the letter finally arrived, but had no idea why it was more than a century late. She said it may have fallen behind a piece of furniture. Before the Internet, people wrote letters on paper. They then put these letters in an envelope. The sender then bought a stamp from a post office and stuck it on the envelope. They then put it in a mailbox in the street. A postal worker would collect the envelope and the letter would begin its journey. It usually took a few days to reach its destination, if the address was in the same country. It could take weeks if the address was overseas. It sailed on a ship and was called "seamail". Later, airplanes transported mail and we used "airmail". However, there was a slight problem with the letter that arrived 107 years late. The person to whom it was addressed was no longer living. He passed away in 1951.

HOMework

1. VOCABULARY EXTENSION: Choose several of the words from the text. Use a dictionary or Google's search field (or another search engine) to build up more associations / collocations of each word.

2. INTERNET: Search the Internet and find out more about this news story. Share what you discover with your partner(s) in the next lesson.

3. WRITING LETTERS: Make a poster about writing letters. Show your work to your classmates in the next lesson. Did you all have similar things?

4. LETTERS: Write a magazine article about us all moving back to writing letters instead of sending emails. Include imaginary interviews with people who are for and against this.

Read what you wrote to your classmates in the next lesson. Write down any new words and expressions you hear from your partner(s).

5. WHAT HAPPENED NEXT? Write a newspaper article about the next stage in this news story. Read what you wrote to your classmates in the next lesson. Give each other feedback on your articles.

6. LETTER: Write a letter to an expert on writing letters. Ask him/her three questions about writing letters. Give him/her three of your opinions on letter-writing. Read your letter to your partner(s) in your next lesson. Your partner(s) will answer your questions.
